Field-Configuring Events: Time, Space and Relations

“Field-Configuring Events” (FCE) are temporary social organizations such as conferences, trade shows or festivals. FCE assemble diverse members of an organizational field (e.g. an industry) in a bounded time and space to exchange information and coordinate activities. They play an important role in structuring and shaping professional, technological, or regional domains. This DFG Scientific Network aims to foster an exchange between different disciplinary perspectives (economic geography, business studies, economic sociology) in order to advance the theoretical understanding of the spatial and social logics of FCE and to gauge different analytical and methodological strategies for exploring these venues.

The 2nd workshop of the DFG Scientific Network is dedicated to temporalities. FCE are, by definition, short-term occurrences (events) in longer-term contexts (fields). In other words, FCE embrace multiple entangled temporalities in which the relation between event and field is played out. The workshop aims to shed light on both how these temporalities interact and how temporal structures are used to give form to the evolution of organizational fields.
